TCPI'S 22nd ANNUAL SYMPOSIUM TO ADDRESS THE IMPACT OF GLOBAL DISRUPTION ON THE FUTURE OF TAX

- Pre-Event Webcast Will Frame Symposium Discussion -

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8, 2021 – The Tax Council Policy Institute (TCPI) announced that its 22nd Annual Tax Policy & Practice Symposium will be held online from February 10-12, 2021. The virtual format, a first for the TCPI Symposium, exemplifies this year's theme, "Tax in a Time of Global Disruption: The Future Accelerated and Transformed." EY, a global leader in assurance, tax, transaction and advisory services, is the event's program manager.

TCPI's fully interactive, online symposium will feature keynote speakers, panels and facilitated small groups on the long-term implications of the global disruptions that are affecting all aspects of tax. The three-day event will consist of four to five hours of content each day to accommodate all US time zones. Program details, including registration information, are available at www.tcpi.org.

"The global disruptions of 2020 have created significant challenges for governments, businesses, and tax departments," said Lynda K. Walker, Esq., Executive Director and General Counsel of TCPI.

"This year's symposium focuses on the ongoing responses to these developments and what this new world order means for tax policy, tax administration, and the corporate tax function. Participants will have the opportunity to look ahead to how this period of disruption will reshape the future of tax."

Symposium discussion topics include:

- The economic outlook, the role of deficits, and modern monetary theory
- Changing global business models and "Made in America" initiatives

- The evolution - or revolution - in global tax policy
- Tax administration in the digital age
- The challenges and opportunities arising from changing workforce dynamics
- Leading the tax department through multi-dimensional change
- New taxes providing new revenue sources aligned with new policy objectives
- The role of tax in the focus on corporate social responsibility
- Shaping the future of tax for 2021 and beyond

“As we look forward to getting back to normal, we know nothing will be just the same as it was,” said Barbara Angus, EY Global Tax Policy Leader. “Tax executives must innovate to respond to new economic pressures, shifts in their companies’ business, changing societal norms, and advances in technology. It’s a pleasure to work with TCPI to develop this program for business, government and academia leaders to delve into the transformational change in the world of tax.”

Leading up to the event, TCPI and EY will host a webcast on Tax in a Time of Global Disruption on January 12, 2021, focusing on the economic, political, and policy landscape for 2021. The webcast will provide a foundation for the topics that will be explored in depth during the three-day symposium.
